1. Course outline

- Use the following table to organize the topics to be taught in the course. If you need to include topics that cover other requirements you have to teach (for example, national syllabus), make sure that you do so in an integrated way, but also differentiate them using italics. Add as many rows as you need.
 - This document should not be a day-by-day accounting of each unit. It is an outline showing how you will distribute the topics and the time to ensure that students are prepared to comply with the requirements of the subject
 - This outline should show how you will develop the teaching of the subject. It should reflect the individual nature of the course in your classroom and should not just be a “copy and paste” from the subject guide.
- If you will teach both higher and standard level, make sure that this is clearly identified in your outline.

2. IB internal assessment requirement to be completed during the course

Briefly explain how and when you will work on it. Include the date when you will first introduce the internal assessment requirement, when the internal assessment requirement will be due and how students will be prepared to do it.

The IA will be a historical investigation into a topic of the students' choice. IA will be mainly introduced between September and October of year 1. By February of year 1, learners must submit the first draft of "Identification and evaluation of sources". By April of year 1, learners must submit the first draft of "investigation". By September of year 2, learners must submit the second draft of "Identification and evaluation of sources". By October of year 2, learners need to submit the second draft of "investigation". All of this will happen under the supervision of the teacher. By end-November of year 2, learners need to submit the final draft of the IA to the teacher.

3. Links to TOK

You are expected to explore links between the topics of your subject and TOK. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your course outline that would allow your students to make links with TOK. Describe how you would plan the lesson.

Topic	Link with TOK (including description of lesson plan)
Prescribed Subject 4: Rights and Protests Case study 1: Civil rights movement in the United States (1954 -1965)	This topic will be related to TOK in various ways. For example, the Civil Rights movement can be linked in TOK in understanding what sources to believe and what sources to ignore. In a time of tense and controversial race relations where the White population of America resisted equality to African Americans, one must look deeper into events to fully understand the reasons and motivations. TOK is clearly linked here since this topic is still a topic at the forefront of society today. Students will be able to compare what they read with what they know in the present time. They will be able to compare the different points of view and the complexities of race relations in the USAs history. Students will explore how this topic has evolved over time.

4. Approaches to learning

Every IB course should contribute to the development of students' approaches to learning skills. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your outline that would allow your students to specifically develop one or more of these skill categories (thinking, communication, social, self-management or research).

Topic	Contribution to the development of students' approaches to learning skills (including one or more skill category)
World History Topic 11: Causes and Effects of 20th Century Wars (WWII)	In this unit students will examine and understand the expansionist policies of Japan, Italy and Germany. Students will be responsible to choose one of the countries and create a presentation either justifying or condemning the historical sequence of events followed by one of the countries mentioned above. Communication: (1) students need to carefully prepare their points to be persuasive, (2) students need to organize their talks to be easily understand Self-management/research: (1) students need to work according to the schedule to complete their tasks, (2) students need to investigate and use a variety of sources Thinking: (1) students need to examine, evaluate, and analyze information to make a strong argument in their presentation

5. International mindedness

Every IB course should contribute to the development of international-mindedness in students. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your outline that would allow your students to analyse it from different cultural perspectives. Briefly explain the reason for your choice and what resources you will use to achieve this goal.

Topic	Contribution to the development of international mindedness (including resources you will use)
Case study 2: Apartheid South Africa (1948 – 1964)	Students are encouraged to examine: Should we have a global international community to investigate, intervene, and settle conflicts or should we regionalize these organizations? Discussions/and opinion based essays: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -What are the pros and cons of an international organization like the UN? -How can we be sure a global organization like the UN understands the complexity of all conflicts? -How can we be sure a global organization like the UN does not hold biases when dealing with conflicts in different regions of the world? - Would it be better to create regional organizations under the umbrella of the United Nations to investigate, intervene, and resolve conflicts, to give a more autonomous and understandable solution?

6. Development of the IB learner profile

Through the course it is also expected that students will develop the attributes of the IB learner profile. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your course outline and explain how the contents and related skills would pursue the development of any attribute(s) of the IB learner profile that you will identify.

Topic	Contribution to the development of the attribute(s) of the IB learner profile
World History Topic 12: The Cold War: Superpower Tensions and Rivalries (20th Century)	This topic examines the different political, economical, and social ideologies that existed between the USA and the USSR from 1945 to 1991. In this unit students will develop a couple of the IB learner profiles that integrate well with this topic. Principled: examination of the Communist society that existed over its society for decades allows students to understand the lack of rights people suffered under a totalitarian regime. Furthermore, analyzing the people's move to end the Soviet Union in 1991 allows us to better understand the suffering that existed. We can learn from this past event and relate it to more recent oppressive regimes throughout the world where peoples' rights and integrity have not been recognized. Knowledgeable: This unit allows students to examine the two societies that existed in the USA, and the USSR and examine issues that arose throughout the Cold war conflict and analyze the significance of these issues both locally (within the USA and the USSR) as well as globally (proxy wars, other areas of influence throughout the world)

7. Resources

Are instructional materials and other resources available in sufficient quality, quantity and variety to give effective support to the aims and methods of the courses? Will students have access to resources beyond the ones available at school? Briefly describe what plans are in place if changes are needed.

Yes I believe materials and resources are in sufficient quality and quantity. First and foremost, as a teacher I have in my personal belongings all IB textbooks for all the topics I will be teaching over the course of 11th and 12th grade. As you are well aware these books not only provide course content but activities, primary, secondary sources and information on how to prepare students for the various forms of assessment.

Also, our students as well as myself have access to the internet and technology allowing for research to be done effectively. I feel with the proper combination of textbooks and the internet we will as a class and a school be able to effectively support the aims and methods of the school.
